

A Fuller Realism: What Half the Population Adds to Realpolitik

This talk is hosted by the Coral Bell School of Asia Pacific Affairs and the Global Institute for Women's Leadership

Classical IR realism (Realpolitik) remains the dominant paradigm for national security practitioners, premised on seeing the world clearly, objectively, and comprehensively as the foundation for rational, prudent foreign policy. But if only half the population's sight, perspectives, and skills inform that vision, a fuller realism - one incorporating both halves of humanity - offers a surer path to true national security.

Speaker

Professor Valerie Hudson,
Texas A&M University

Panellists

Dr Ben Day, Coral Bell School of Asia Pacific Affairs
Prof George Lawson, Coral Bell School of Asia Pacific Affairs
Dr Elise Stephenson, Global Institute for Women's Leadership

Details

5-7PM AEST, Tuesday 19 May,
Theatrette 2.02, Sir Roland Wilson Building, 120 McCoy Cct, Acton

Register

Australian
National University